

WOMAN

Up Before Mayor For Selling Worthless Goods

Made To Return Money To The Purchaser

"That there are 'fakes' in every business was further demonstrated Thursday when a woman agent sold a bill of goods to a local millinery firm and secured the money for the same before the goods could be examined. However, the matter was settled in police court a short time afterwards with no loss to the local firm.

Thursday morning a woman appeared at one of the South Main street stores with a line of colorings and cleaning preparations which she was desirous of selling. About $20 worth was disposed of easily and the woman left the store.

Several pieces of millinery were in need of immediate cleaning and coloring and the newly purchased preparations were put to use. Instead of bringing the desired result the preparations merely washed off. They were worthless.

The agent was successfully sought and answered a summons to the mayor's office where the matter was settled without an affidavit being filed. The money was returned to the local dealer and the worthless preparations were returned to the agent who made no further efforts to dispose of her line of goods in the city.

EGGS

Must Be Fresh Says The Food Department

Columbus, O., April 12.—Nothing the State Dairy and Food Department has done has created so much interest as the campaign against the sale of eggs that are unfit for food. Information coming to the department through a voluminous correspondence and personal interviews developed many curious things connected with the egg trade in this state.

Eggs for shipment are usually packed in cases containing thirty dozen, ten layers of three dozen each. Such a case was recently sold by a producer directly to a consumer who buys his eggs in case lots. One entire layer in this case was filled with three dozen small white goods, about the size and shape of hen's eggs. In other words the consumer was defrauded to the extent of ten per cent of his purchase.

Incubator eggs, eggs from stolen nests, eggs tainted with the flavor of oil, onions, etc., rotten eggs, dirty eggs, washed eggs, eggs containing dead chicks, and sometimes even live chicks, in fact, all kinds of eggs find their way to market in the same lot.

A year or more ago in one of the small cities in this state, a number of cases of eggs were awaiting shipment in a storage warehouse. An employee who was standing near one of the cases heard the faint "peep, peep" of a young chick. On removing the eggs from the case he found the one that contained the chick wrapped it in a piece of flannel, and placed it in a show window in the sun. In a day or two the chick emerged from the shell and is today a busy, full-grown hen. But do not forget that this hen was sold as an egg and not as poultry. How many rotten eggs or eggs with dead chicks were in that case is not known.

This story illustrates the fact that conditions under which eggs are marketed in Ohio are so bad that the big eastern markets discriminate against Ohio eggs to such an extent that when eggs are abundant, those from other states that have stringent egg laws are given the preference. This means lower prices for Ohio eggs, and every farmer and poultryman in the state, whether he grades his eggs or not, is a sufferer. It is the object of State Dairy and Food Commissioner Strode to place Ohio in the front rank in the egg markets of the country, so that Ohio producers will get as high or higher prices than the producers of other states.

Eggs of all sizes and every quality—good, bad and indifferent—have been mixed together and marketed in this state for so many years that the average price is always lower than in other states that have stringent egg laws. For this reason the campaign made by the State Dairy and Food Commissioner is not only in the interest of the consumer, but in the interest of the producer.

COMMENDED

Are Moral Requirements In Chase's Theatre

(Washington Monthly Bulletin)

Inasmuch as it is considered a wise and proper policy to encourage attendance at entertainments that are commendable, the Truth Society feels it a duty to publicly commend the one theatre in Washington which is absolutely free from everything immoral and suggestive in the entertainments 's presents—namely Chase's. The manager of this popular playhouse, Miss H. Winnifred De Witt, conducts a rigid censorship over productions scheduled for Chase's, and it is not a farical censorship like that of our police department. Miss De Witt issues every Monday morning to the players who are booked for the week a printed notice to the effect that no line, scene, or act, which would be out of place in the drawing room of a refined family, will be permitted on Chase's stage, and her orders are always carried out. Furthermore, the name of God in jest is prohibited by this manager. It will be a bright day for the stage when all resident managers will follow the example of Miss H. Winnifred De Witt, Manager of Chase's Theatre.
